

Entity Formation

Once you have decided what type of business entity you will be the next step is to form a legal entity. Our firm has extensive experience at forming professional dental corporations, professional dental limited liability companies, professional veterinary corporations, professional veterinary limited liability companies and other business entities.

If you are buying a dental practice or veterinary practice it is essential that your entity is properly formed before the closing date. Frequently entity formations are rejected by the Secretary of State because the name is not available or something in the name is inappropriate for the type of entity formation you have chosen.

In addition to forming a business entity it is also crucial that your corporate bylaws or LLC operating agreement are tailored to your specific needs and not just boilerplate document.

For more information regarding the formation of your professional entity please contact nate@walpolelaw.com